News

Naman Howell is proud to announce the addition of patent litigation specialist, Jacqueline Altman, to its Waco, Texas litigation team. Jacqueline, who joined Naman Howell in September, solidifies Naman Howell's reputation as the go-to firm representing clients in the region's rapidly expanding patent litigation docket.

Prior to joining Naman Howell, Jacqueline was an associate at Wilson Sonsini Goodrich & Rosati in San Diego, where she focused her practice on representing generic pharmaceutical companies in Hatch-Waxman patent litigation. One of her high profile wins included being a member of the defense team that successfully invalidated the patents relating to the blockbuster drug Restasis®, a verdict upheld by the Federal Circuit and United States Supreme Court. She also represented clients in a wide variety of trade secret disputes as well as complex commercial litigation.

Jacqueline is a cum laude graduate of Baylor University School of Law. She also holds a B.S. in Chemistry from the University of California, Irvine, and strengthens Naman Howell's ability to provide strategic advice to clients across a variety of industry sectors experiencing rapid IP evolution such as telecoms, electronics, IT, biotech, chemical, pharmaceutical, and engineering.

Before private practice, Jacqueline served as a judicial clerk for the Honorable K. Nicole Mitchell of the Eastern District of Texas, Tyler Division. She is admitted to the State Bar of California as well as Texas.
